

Irīna Vereščagina

Liepaja Academy of Pedagogy

Liepaja University

Liepaja, Latvia

E-Mail: irinaverescagina@inbox.lv

Supervision in the Social Work pedagogical process – Problems and Solutions

Nowadays society does not pay enough attention to the social question solution. It is possible to influence that process positively by making changes in legislation, favouring necessary study programme promotion and development for corresponding social work and preparing the professional specialists for this social work. The life nominates high demands for education opportunities, curriculum contents which can guarantee students high qualitative knowledge, skill and abilities acquiring process and level of that. For social worker profession`s development and qualitative improvement of social work in Latvia is necessary to implement the supervision system which has been well-grounded in many scientists research. It is a new approach in promotion of professional support and growing as for students as for social workers. The author of the following research shows the necessity of the supervision system development in study process.