

Irena Pranskeviciute

Director of NGO Confederation for Children

irena.pranckeviciute@gmail.com

The new Generation of G: generosity and grace

Today the world is facing fundamental changes - the small and the outsiders are growing as a grass-root power that silently destroys existing power structures of organizations, government and global unions. Non-governmental organizations in such post totalitarian countries as Lithuania had accumulated strength and knowledge, however during the period of economic leap these organizations were at the margins of the state interests. The crash of trust of economy and government had rise anger and will power of individuals. Social environment and emotional capital of the state became an issue that can not be neglected today.

Lithuania during the 50 years of totalitarian regime that was replaced by pure consumerism culture of economic growth had completely crushed emotional capital of the state. Today children of Lithuania are the least happy in Europe, the numbers of bullying at school are the highest and we are the world leaders according to suicides rates. Just to compare - the suicide rates in Lithuania 80 years ago were one of the lowest in Europe. Lithuania was a kingdom of the great power and was a stalker to demolish Soviet Union and to unite the Baltic states for the protection of independence.

Today we see that the system of social care does not work, the exciting growth of GDP did not created well being. If we have lost a generation (Stalin had said, if you want to destroy a nation – you have to diminish and kill the pride of a single generation.) what indeed are directions for the new generation, how to build up a social environment and emotional capital of the state?